1. MiFID II Presentation

MiFID II (Markets in Financial Instruments Directive) - Directive 2014/65 / EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 15 May 2014 on markets in financial instruments (known as MiFID II) together with Regulation (EU) 600/2014 (MiFIR) replaces Directive 2004/39 / EC (MiFID I) transposed into national laws and regulations by Law no.126/11.06.2018 on markets in financial instruments, ASF Regulation no. 5/2019, as well as by the other regulations adopted in this area.

MiFID II represents the upgrading of the harmonized legal framework governing the requirements applicable to investment firms, regulated markets, data reporting service providers and third country firms which provides investment services or carries out investment activities in the Union.

MiFID II Directive applies to investment firms (credit institutions, financial investment services companies, investment management companies, etc.), market operators, data reporting service providers and third country companies providing investment services or invest in the Union.

The purpose of MiFID II is to improve the competitiveness of EU financial markets and ensure a high level of harmonized protection for investors with financial instruments such as shares, bonds, fund units, derivative financial instruments and various structured products, obtaining a greater degree of transparency of pre-bidding and post-trading that will apply to all trading venues and over-the-counter (OTC) markets.

Client classification is a key element of MiFID II. Clients are informed about their category, along with the associated level of protection (in decreasing order of protection):

- Retail Clients
- Professional Clients
- Eligible counterparties

The classification of clients in one of the MiFID II categories is made either at the time of initiating the business relationship with the BRD or at the time of accessing a product or service that is subject to MiFID II regulations.

Details on each category of MiFID II clients are found in Chapter 4 of the presentation document.

Also, the request to change the level of protection at a higher level must be mandatory made in writing by the Client (eg, from Professional client to Retail client).

Professional clients and eligible Counterparties have the responsibility to inform BRD of any changes that may affect their classification. If BRD finds that a Client no longer meets the initial conditions on the basis of which it was considered to be a Professional client or an eligible counterparty, the Bank shall take appropriate measures.

5. Target Market

Based on regulatory criteria established at the regulatory level, BRD determines the Client's profile from an investment point of view and establishes the financial instruments considered appropriate for each profile. They must meet the needs of the Clients in those target markets.

Fitting the target market applies to all types of clients to whom investment services are provided, except for the custody service for which the target market is not necessary.

The criteria on which the target market is established are the following:

- a. target Client type;
- b. knowledge and experience;
- c. the financial situation;
- d. risk tolerance;
- e. Client's needs and goals.

The negative target market refers to the financial instruments in which the Client should not invest. The Bank defines the financial instruments that it does not consider appropriate for the Client's investment profile. In such situations, BRD sends a Warning to the Client indicating that the requested product does not match its profile.

If the Client, after receiving the warning, intends to continue to access the product, BRD has the right to decide whether to continue trading the product with the Client.

The Client's investment profile is re-evaluated annually by completing the investment profile evaluation questionnaire or whenever there is a change at the level of the Client, communicated by BRD, which could influence the evaluation.

6. Appropriateness

BRD requires the MiFID II Retail client to provide information on its investment knowledge and experience in relation to the particular type of product or service proposed or required, so that BRD is able to determine whether the investment service or product envisaged is appropriate for the Client (Appropriateness Test).

By completing the Appropriateness Test, the Client must provide accurate and complete answers to the questions mentioned in the questionnaire so that BRD can assess whether the investment service or product considered is appropriate for him.

If the Client does not provide the information referred to in the previous paragraph or if he provides insufficient information about his knowledge and experience, BRD warns him that it is not in a position to determine whether the envisaged service or product is appropriate.

If BRD estimates that, in accordance with the above, the product or service is inappropriate for the Client, it warns him of this aspect and, depending on the nature of the product (non-complex or complex financial instrument), can decide whether to continue the trading process with / offering the service to the Client (s).

The Client assumes the obligation to inform BRD about any changes that have occurred regarding the provision of the initially transmitted information, including by completing the Appropriateness Test.

BRD requires the Client to complete the appropriateness test for all complex and non-complex financial instruments.

BRD Clients, individual persons who wish to access financial instruments/investment services offered by BRD and/or BRD Asset Management S.A.I S.A (BRD AM) have the possibility to browse online, on the BRD website, www.brd.ro the MIFID II documentation (Statement of the MIFID II Presentation Document and the Best Execution and Client Order Handling Policy for Retail and Professional Clients, the investment profile evaluation Questionnaire, the Appropriateness Test), of the signing of the framework contract depending on the product/service of selected investments as well as the execution of subscription/redemption operations of fund units managed by BRD AM.

9. Financial Instruments and Risks Associated with Investments in Financial Instruments

9.1 Financial instruments

Under MiFID II, financial instruments are divided into two distinct categories according to their degree of risk:

- a. non-complex financial instruments;
- b. complex financial instruments.

a. Non-complex financial instruments from the MiFID II perspective are as follows:

- i. shares admitted to trading on a regulated market or equivalent market of a third country or in an MTF, if they are shares in companies, except shares in collective investment undertakings other than UCITS and shares incorporating a derivative;
- ii. bonds or other forms of debt instruments admitted to trading on a regulated market or equivalent market of a third country or in an MTF, except those incorporating a derivative or a structure that makes it difficult for the Client to understand the risks involved;
- iii. money market instruments, except those incorporating a derivative financial instrument or a structure that makes it difficult for the Client to understand the risks involved;
- iv. shares or units of UCITS, with the exception of the structured UCITS referred to in the second subparagraph of Article 36 (1) of Regulation (EU) No. 583/2010;
- v. Structured deposits, with the exception of those incorporating a structure that makes it difficult for the Client to understand the risks associated with profitability or the cost of foreclosure of the product;
- vi. other financial instruments which are not complex for the purposes of this paragraph.

b. Complex financial instruments are the other financial instruments that are not listed in a) above (e.g. structured placements that incorporate a complex financial structure, derivatives: FX Forward, FX Swap, FX Option, Forward Rate Agreement, Interest Rate Option, Interest Rate Swap, listed structured products, etc.).

The main financial instruments in relation to which BRD offers financial investment services are:

Fixed income such as government bonds, treasury certificates, corporate bonds, etc.: they are fixed income (coupon) financial instruments that can be traded on the secondary or primary market; it is a form of loan that gives the holder a right of claim on the issuer of these securities. Depending on the type of issuer, fixed-income securities may be government (government securities issued by central government), municipal (issued by local government) or corporate (issued by commercial / financial companies).

Government bonds – they are debt securities issued by the government and, depending on their maturity, they are divided into:

- a) bonds - government titles with an original maturity of more than 1 year, with periodic interest payments (coupon)
- b) treasury bills - government bonds with an initial maturity of less than one year, without coupon, issued at a value lower than their nominal value payable at maturity.

Depending on the moment of trading of government securities, there are two types of trading markets:

- a) the primary market where investors may acquire securities at the date of issue by the issuing state (by the Ministry of Finance in the case of Romania) through a bank acting as an authorized primary market intermediary;
- b) the secondary market, where investors may enter into transactions with government securities after their issuance, in counterparty with or using the services of authorized intermediaries

Options - are bilateral contracts where a party acquires the right to buy or sell to the other party a financial instrument or a commodity at a predetermined price. The party acquiring this right (option) is the buyer and pays a price (strike price) in advance to the seller of the option. By the time the option is exercised, the parties have no obligation towards each other.

Forward - is a contract in which the parties engage in a transaction with a future settlement date and at a preset quotation. This type of contract can take a variety of forms depending on the underlying asset, such as forward currency (buy / sell a currency against another at a future date), forward rate agreement (FRA), etc. Thus, the two parties undertake to buy or sell a certain underlying asset at a future date and at an agreed price at the date of the transaction.

Swap - is a derivative contract in which the parties change certain benefits of a financial asset (s). The benefits that are subject to this exchange depend on the type of financial asset. Basically, the two parties decide to exchange a cash flow against another. The swap contract defines the dates when this cash flow will take place and how the amounts will be calculated. As a rule, at the time of the transaction initiation, at least one of the cash flows is dependent on a market variable such as interest rate, exchange rate, commodity price, etc.

Structured placements - are placements whose return depends on the evolution of a support asset, such as exchange rate, interest rate, commodity price, stock index, stock basket, etc. Capital can be guaranteed on maturity or not, depending on the product. One of the risks is that the discounted return is inferior to a term deposit if the projected scenario is not confirmed by the evolution of the underlying asset. In case of the anticipated liquidation of the placement there is the risk of partial recovery of the invested capital.

Foreign exchange transactions on a collateral basis - are executed by BRD on the order of the Client, based on a collateral deposit with the BRD. The Client's open position may not exceed an agreed multiple of the amount set as collateral. This collateral deposit is intended to cover any unfavorable differences that may result from foreign exchange transactions. Foreign exchange transactions based on collateral deposit are not accepted for Retail clients.

Shares - are variable income financial instruments. Shares confer on the holder the shareholder status and ownership right over the issuer's net assets according to the number of shares held in the total number of shares issued.

Preferential rights - are negotiable securities that incorporate the right of the holder to subscribe with priority shares in a share capital increase according to the number of rights held on the subscription date, within a specified period of time.

Fund units - represents a holding of capital in the net assets of an investment fund.

Exchange Traded Products (ETPs) - are financial products that investors can trade them on regulated markets (stock exchanges). They are designed to track the performance of an index of shares, bonds, commodities or currencies etc. This category includes "ETN" - Exchange Traded Notes and "ETF" - Exchange Traded Funds.

Futures are derivative financial instruments whose price derives from the price of another financial instrument commonly called the underlying asset (shares, exchange rate, etc.). A futures contract is the commitment to buy or sell a certain amount of the underlying asset at a negotiated price at a certain date in the future. Fulfilling the commitment of a futures contract at maturity is generally achieved by paying the difference between the value of the futures contract and the spot price of the underlying asset.

9.2 Risks associated with investments in financial instruments

Market risk - the risk of losses on balance sheet and off-balance sheet items due to unfavorable market price fluctuations (such as, for example, share prices, interest rates, exchange rates);

Sectoral risk - is given by investing in companies belonging to the same economic sector or dependent on one branch. In the event of economic instability in the sector concerned, all these companies may be negatively affected.

Risk of total loss - is the risk that an investment becomes worthless, total loss may occur when the issuer of a security is no longer able to pay its obligations for economic or legal reasons.

Transfer risk - depending on the country concerned, the issuers securities or foreign investors present an additional risk arising from possible control measures that may complicate or even hinder the realization or liquidation of an investment.

Interest rate risk - is the risk deriving from unfavorable changes in the interest rate and its effect on the present value of future cash flows generated by the investments made.

Inflation risk - is reflected in the depreciation of the capital purchase value due to the increase in the inflation rate.

Credit risk - the current or future risk of a negative impact on profits and capital as a result of a default by the borrower of its contractual obligations or its failure to meet established ones; each issuer traded in the capital markets presents a certain degree of risk, given that past performance is not a guarantee of future performance. Credit risk refers to the possibility of a counterparty's insolvency, namely the inability of one of the parties to a transaction to fulfill its obligations, such as the payment of dividends, interest, repayment of principal at maturity, or failure to meet these obligations in full.

Foreign exchange risk or currency risk is the risk that the value of an investment is affected by exchange rate fluctuations.

Liquidity risk is the risk that not being able to meet expected and unexpected cash flow or collateral requirements, current and future, when they become due and reasonably priced.

Early redemption risk ("callable") is specific to issuers who reserve the right to early repurchase the bond issue under certain circumstances.

Leverage risk can lead to considerable losses, even over relatively short periods of time. The prices of leveraged instruments are significantly influenced by changes in the price of the underlying asset, such variations being able to lead to substantial gains but also to considerable losses.

The risk related to investments in units fund is, but not limited to, the possible loss suffered by the Client as a result of the decrease in the unit value of the fund's net assets.

10. The non-existence of the right to terminate unilaterally for transactions with distressed financial instruments

BRD informs the Client that it will not benefit from the right to terminate unilaterally the transactions with financial instruments concluded at a distance nor to the right to unilaterally terminate contracts for financial investment services whose pricing depends on fluctuations in the financial markets that may occur during the withdrawal period and are independent of BRD, being related to:
